

going native

By Les Anstis

Naturally Native is positively humming. We are rectifying the deferred maintenance, Michelle has the potting machine singing as the myosotidiums and hebe's fly out the door getting ready for the spring sales while the prop house is alive doing cuttings for next season.

This is week two of my life as a nursery "person" and I am enjoying the culture of the business, the skill of the staff and the assistance and support from everyone in the industry (including our competitors). This industry definitely has a culture of its own and it reflects some of the core kiwi earth type values. I like it. It has a soul.

My learning curve is steep but Naturally Native has a good team who know their stuff and willing to assist you with your needs.

Winter is truly upon us and we've pass the shortest day of the year. It's time to get that larger regeneration work done to get the plant established for the spring flush. Don't just plonk the plants in the ground. Do it right. Make it a legacy of your management/skill that our future generation can appreciate the natural heritage of Aotearoa.

If you need ecological/technical support to plan your sites to ensure it complies with any regulatory requirements and is ascetically pleasing both Mark & Hamish Dean are available at very kind consultancy rates. We must congratulate Hamish on getting an A class honours in his Master in Applied Ecology.

Alternatively ring Ann. She's a wise old morpork with energy to burn who knows her stuff. If we haven't got what you need she'll either find it or suggest an alternative.

Currently we have a very good range of discounted landscape grade products that need planting. Talk to Teresa to get a copy of this list and Lanie is waiting to despatch it to you.

Naturally Native's goal is to rebuild its brand as the iconic supplier of Native New Zealand plants. This is our business. We have the professional skills, quality plants and if required we can arrange the planting and maintenance.
